PRINCIPAL'S CORNER

Dear Clovis Families,

For those of you who may not know, our Clovis Grove Elementary School Resource Officer (SRO) is Officer Rick Heinen. We would like our families to get to know more about SROs in our school. This information may be helpful to families.

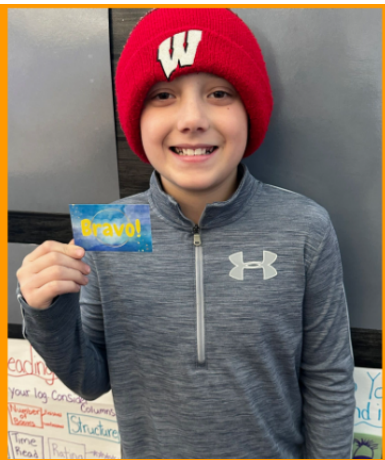

Officer Rick Heinen is here to help! The SRO works in the school in order to build a strong community that utilizes police resources proactively. When visiting our school you may find our SRO doing any or all of the following:

- Building relationships with students and staff
- Providing security to the school through observation and digital monitoring
- Leading our school's safety planning and drills
- Educating our staff and students about various topics such as internet safety, constitutional law, local law, law enforcement roles, drugs and controlled substances
- Providing community resources to families

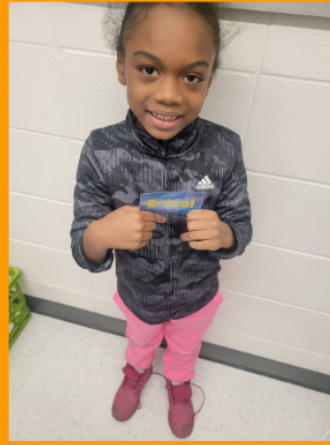

In addition to the proactive activities that our SRO engages in, they are also available to assist in the enforcement of local laws and school rules that impact our student's learning environment. The SRO intervenes in an effort to eliminate bullying, vaping, and fights, etc. They work to ensure that our students are safe.

Officer Rick Heinen has a passion for students. He spends time in the hallways, in classrooms, in the lunchroom, in the gym and at recess in order to build positive relationships with all students. He is an important part of our school community. Students have many opportunities to get to know Officer Rick Heinen and learn to recognize police officers as helpful resources in the community. It is truly a partnership between the Menasha Police Department and the Menasha Joint School District that continues to create a fabulous community. The next time you are visiting our school stop by and say, "Hi".

Your Partner in Education,
Mrs. Richter, Clovis Grove Principal

P'romise has been a great helper within the classroom and outside of the classroom! She picked up someone else's lunch tray, pushes in chairs in the classroom and helps other students clean up their area. Keep up the great work P'romise!

Joree went out of his way to help someone with math that was gone the previous day. He made sure to teach the problems instead of just give out the answers. Bravo to your kindness and patience. Keep up the awesome work!

Kalia always goes out of her way to not only help other students, but to also help different teachers. Bravo to all of your extra time and effort helping others. Keep it up!

Lola is always polite and respectful and is a super helper in organizing and cleaning the art room!
BRAVO, Lola (3-0)!

Nova was being a great partner during math workplaces. She did not give her partner the answer but explained a strategy he could use to solve the equation. Bravo Nova!

Bennett noticed Cassian playing at the table by himself. Bennett went over and asked to play with him! Look at their smiles now! What a great friend Bennett!

Syriah isn't afraid to stand up for what she knows is right. Mrs. Laber has noticed her stand up for her friends and teachers many times this year. Way to be a great leader, Syriah!

Creating Joyful Reading Routines at Home

Now that we have been in school for a couple of months, it is time to check in with our reading routines. Learning to read is hard work, but loving to read is not! To be readers we need things to read. Here are some ideas to help establish reading routines at home.

1. Fill your home with books. Books can be expensive but there are ways around this. Visit your local library Menasha Public Library, visit thrift stores, rummage sales, or trade with friends and family. Consider giving books as gifts. Also, contact your child's teacher to help you locate books.

2. Sneak in more reading. Have books everywhere in the house-bathrooms, bedrooms, living rooms, and cars. Find those times you can switch out screens for books! Great places include: riding in the car, waiting for appointments, or sitting at sport events.

3. Create a routine. Set a time, find a space, and make it an expectation to read each day at the time. Join in and read with your child. It is incredibly powerful for kids to see their parent or caregivers to embrace reading for a pleasure.

4. Embrace Choices. It is okay for your child to read one type of books, an easy book, or to reread the same book. Don't force a book; this may take the joyfulness away. Consider audiobooks when traveling. They can lead to great family conversations.

Finally, focus on reading as a joyful experience. It is not just one more thing to do. it is an experience waiting to happen!

A Note from the Clovis Math Team

It is hard to believe we have finished our first Trimester at school and are now $\frac{1}{3}$ of the way done with the school year already! I am sure you have noticed how much your student has learned since they began the school year. This is a busy time of year and a long break away from school is quickly approaching. We are providing a couple ideas of things you can do with your child to spend time together while also doing a little math. The best learning comes when we are having fun or it is meaningful to us. Enjoy trying one of these activities with your child.

-Learn a new game that might have a math component to it (examples might include card games like cribbage, golf, or double solitaire).

-Cook or bake with your child. See if they can read the recipe. Ask questions such as: “What if we needed to double the recipe? How many of the different ingredients would we need?”.

-Make a family calendar or countdown for the month of December. You can ask your child questions about time such as:

“How many days until our different family events? What will happen tomorrow? What happened yesterday?”.

-Have your child count collections of things. This can be especially fun to do in the car as you are driving. You could ask things like: “How many houses have lights on them?” “What are some ways we can skip count to that number?” What about if we saw one more or one less, how many would we have?”.

Thanks for finding ways to incorporate math into your everyday.

-Elise Bushweiler and Katie Fugar
